THE BOYS .- Are parents ignorant of the conduct of their boys when permitted to run at large? If they are, they should begin to inquire into it at once. Some of them will be found falling into the worst society, yielding by degrees to the fatal tempter soon they will be lost forever, unless they are made to change their course. This can be effected alone by keeping them at home at night, and during the day, when they have no business out.

Beware of the liberties you grant your sons, or you may some day be called upon to follow them to a drunkard's grave-a thought too horrible to indulge. Look to this matter before it is too late, and reclaim your sons from the alluring paths of vice. It's your duty not only as a parent, but as a citizen. Are you willing for one of your family to become a pest and a nuisance to the community, as well as a disgrace to those he should honor and obey ?

A TRICK .- Breslau, a juggler, being at a certain place with his troupe, met with such bad success that they were almost starved. He repaired to the wardens, and promised to give the profit of a night's conjuration to the poor, if the parish would pay for hiring a room, etc. The charitable bait took, the benefit proved a bumper, and next morning the wardens waited upon the wizard to touch the receipts.

"I have already disposed of them," said Breslau. "The profits were for the poor. I have kept my promise, and given the money to my own people, who are the poorest in this parish !"

"Sir," exclaimed the wardens, " this is a trick."

"I know it," replied the conjurer, "I live by my tricks."

THE FATE OF BOOKS .- Out of 1000 published books 600 never pay the cost of printing, etc., 200 just pay expenses, 100 return a slight profit, and only 100 show a substantial gain. Of these 1000 books, 650 are forgotten by the end of the year, and 150 more at the end of three years; only 50 survive seven years' publicity. Of the 50,000 publications put forth in the seventeenth century, hardly more than 50 have a great reputation, and are reprinted. Of the 80,000 works published in the 'eighteenth century, posterity has hardly preserved more than were rescued from oblivion in the seventeenth century. Men have been writing books these three thousand years, and there are hardly more than 500 writers throughout the globe who have survived the outrages of time and forgetfulness of man.

THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION .- The will of the late John M. Clayton, of Delaware, has been published. The first clause of it is as follows:

"First, I leave to my friends and relatives, as well as to all who may think my opinion of any value, this testimonial-that the religion taught in the New Testament is the best that has been offered for our adoption, both for this world and for that which is to come, and that Jesus Christ was the true Messiah, and will remain forever the Re- of the stream our friends may accompany WILL practice in the Circuit and Probate Courts of the counties of Rankin, Scott, Simpson, convinced of its truthfulness.'

which he immediately acted upon.

Going to the stable-keeper, he said: "How much will you charge me for a carriage and horses to go to the lake ?" "Five dollars."

"Harness them up."

Client went to the lake, came back by railroad, and visited the stable.

"Here's your money," he said, handing out five dollars.

"Where's my carriage and horses?" "At the lake. I only hired them to go can't please any." to the lake."

GOOD VICTUALS .- A schoolma'am ou West narrates her experience as follows: She was teaching a small school in an adjoining town, and boarded round. On visiting a new place, she seated herself with the way station for refreshments, and unfortunto his friends, and the public generally, family round a small pine table, and made a ately the bell rang and the train left before that he has succeeded Mr. B. THE PISHERMAN.

BY JOHN G. SAXE. It was an honest fisherman. We knew him passing well, And he lived by a little pond, Within a little dell.

A grave and quiet man he was, Who loved his book and rod, So even ran his line of life, His neighbors thought it odd.

For science and for books, he said, He never had a wish-No school to him was worth a fig. Except a school of fish.

He ne'er aspired to rank or wealth, Nor cared about a name : For though much famed for fish, He never fished for fame.

Let others bend their necks at sight Of Fashion's giddy wheels-He ne'er had learned the art to fish For anything but eels.

A conning fisherman was he, His angles all were right; The smallest nibble at his bait Was sure to prove a bite.

All day that fisherman would sit Upon an ancient log. And gaze into the water like

A sedentary frog. With all the seeming innocence, And that unconscious look, That other people often wear When they intend to-hook.

To charm the fish he never spoke, Although his voice was fine; He found the most convenient way Was just to drop a line.

And many a gudgeon of the pond, If they could speak to-day, Would own, with grief, this angler had A mighty taking way.

Alas! one day this fisherman Had taken too mu 's grog; And being but a landsman, too, He couldn't keep the log.

'Twas all in vain-with might and main He strove to reach the shore-Down, down he went, to feed the fish

He'd baited oft before. The jury gave their verdict, that 'Twas nothing else but gin Had caused the fisherman to be

So sadly taken in. Though one stood out upon a whim, And said the angler's slaughter, To be exact about the fact, Was clearly gin and water.

The moral of this mournful tale To all is plain and clear. That drinking habits bring a man Too often to his bier.

And he who scorns to take the pledge. And keep the promise fast, May be, in spite of fate, a stiff, Cold waterman at last.
